

Vacancy Announcement
Faculty Tenure-Track Position Starting August 2018
Environmental Justice
Job # 1819-01

Humboldt State University is committed to achieving the goals of equal opportunity and endeavors to employ faculty and staff of the highest quality reflecting the ethnic and cultural diversity of the state

DESCRIPTION: Humboldt State University's College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences and the Environmental Studies Program invite applications for an academic year tenure-track faculty position in Environmental Justice. We seek a candidate who views environmental questions through lenses of racial and social justice, has expertise in theories and practices of social change, has experience with public, community-based, or activist learning and pedagogy, and can be appointed to one of the departments within the College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences (<https://cahss.humboldt.edu/node/153/>).

RANK, SALARY AND BENEFITS: We seek to fill this position at the Assistant Professor rank; however, rank and salary are dependent on the appointee's qualifications and experience. The current California State University Salary Schedule is available at: <http://www.humboldt.edu/aps/docs/salary/Salary-Schedule.pdf>.

Humboldt State University provides an excellent benefits package for faculty. Information about benefits plans can be found at: <http://www.humboldt.edu/forms/node/934>.

PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATIONS: An earned PhD or equivalent in Environmental Studies or related field with a central focus on environmental justice, from an accredited college or university, is preferred at the time of appointment. Applicants with considerable progress towards terminal degree completion by appointment date will be considered. Completion of terminal degree is required prior to the start of the second probationary year following initial appointment.

The successful candidate must demonstrate the following:

- ✓ Passion for teaching and mentoring undergraduate students in scholarship;
- ✓ Interest in conducting participatory (action-oriented) research, and engaging diverse communities in knowledge production and problem-solving;

- ✓ Commitment to and/or experience promoting and fostering a learning environment that is supportive of individuals from diverse backgrounds; and
- ✓ Interest and ability to teach the Environmental Studies courses already in the catalogue, and to teach a new introductory problem-driven, interdisciplinary course.

Preferred qualifications for this position include:

- ✓ Interdisciplinary training;
- ✓ Publication record of scholarship that addresses environmental questions through lenses of racial and social justice;
- ✓ Demonstrated expertise in theories and practices of social change; and
- ✓ Experience with public, community-based, or activist learning and pedagogy.

At the time of appointment, the successful candidate, if not a U.S. citizen, must have authorization from the Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services to work in the United States. For information on the University policy on support for non-immigrant probationary faculty visa acquisition, please visit: <https://www2.humboldt.edu/international/faculty>.

Evidence of degree(s) is required at time of hire.

PROFESSIONAL DUTIES: Candidates should be committed to teaching excellence and to building a strong action-oriented record of scholarship. The successful candidate's duties will primarily serve the Environmental Studies program with an appointment in an academic department within the College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences that best fits their scholarly and disciplinary focus. These departments are: Anthropology, Art, Communication, Critical Race/Gender/ Sexuality Studies, English, Geography, History, Journalism and Mass Communication, Music, Native American Studies, Philosophy, Politics, Religious Studies, Sociology, Theatre/Film/Dance, and World Languages and Cultures. Instructional assignments may include: Introduction to Environmental Studies; Power, Privilege, and the Environment; Research and Analysis in Environmental Studies; Topics in Nature/Culture; Environmental Studies Senior Capstone Experience. Instructional assignments may also include other courses in the successful candidate's area of expertise, as well as teaching in the M.A. Program in Environment and Community. Instructional assignments will be consistent with the programmatic needs of the College of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences, the Environmental Studies program, and the department in which the successful candidate is based.

The primary professional responsibilities of instructional faculty members are: teaching; research, scholarship and creative activity; and service to the University, profession, and community. These responsibilities include: advising students, participation in campus and system-wide committees, maintaining office hours, working collaboratively and productively with colleagues, and participation in academic functions. During the first two years of the probationary period, teaching responsibilities will be reduced by approximately one course each semester. The reduced teaching load supports the establishment of research, scholarship and creative activities required for retention, tenure, and promotion.

GENERAL INFORMATION: HSU is located in Arcata, California, 275 miles north of San Francisco, and is a proud member of the public California State University (CSU) system with a strong history of acting on its ideals of social justice and environmental responsibility. HSU has been ranked as a top western university (U.S. News & World Report) and a "Best in the West" college (Princeton Review). HSU has also been recognized as a Green College, and in 2016 won a national "Outdoor Nation" challenge. It is also a military-friendly, vegan-friendly, and LGBT-friendly institution. HSU hosts nationally recognized performers, speakers, and art exhibitions and is a regional center for the arts. HSU students enjoy a rich campus life through more than 180 campus clubs, access to a state-of-the-art recreational facility, and 12 NCAA Division II athletic teams. Further, HSU is committed to diversity in all forms; it has recently been designated a Hispanic-Serving Institution, is located amongst the largest population of Native Americans in the state, and maintains strong relationships with the twelve federally recognized tribes in its service area.

The Environmental Studies Program provides students with a liberal arts approach to environmental issues, with a thematic focus on social justice and social change. Majors seek practical and theoretical skills to explore structural causes of environmental injustice, build community, and address real-world problems. The program includes courses from across all three colleges on campus, and is also unique in its strong connections with the arts and humanities. It is located in the College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences, which offers study in the humanities, visual and performing arts, and the social sciences.

The faculty is represented in collective bargaining by the California Faculty Association. Our community includes award-winning filmmakers, nationally and internationally exhibited visual artists, internationally recognized environmental creative practitioners and scholars, world-class musicians, and active scholars and organizational leaders in their disciplines. The college is the campus hub for national and international field and study abroad programs. In addition, we prioritize service learning, faculty-student research projects and the integration of career development topics in the classroom. Our faculty and students lead annual social justice and diversity conferences on campus that complement classroom learning experiences. The college includes one of three Native American Studies majors in the California State University and the first multicultural queer studies minor in the system. The college community works to sustain a learning environment that recognizes the value of diversity and encourages intellectual growth, personal expression, mutual respect, and social responsibility.
